

THE GUYRCOOK REPORT DOT PODBEAN DOT COM

This episode of The Guy R Cook Report is titled 11 best free sites to post your resume online, thank you to the patrons that make this possible the list today comes from the link at zip job.com on let's go have a look at that. This is a pretty good list been put together in August of 2018 and I'm sure there's any updates it'll be reflected here in this post so save the link and there's some resources here available also on like why you should upload your resume to job boards how to protect that information like for instance you don't put your street address and your phone number into the public posting spammers love that okay so the top 11 sites they've listed and we'll go through them real quick. Indeed, monster, career builder, Glassdoor, zip recruiter, the muse, Craigslist, yes Craigslist you there's no upload button you copy and paste your resume into Craigslist, USAJOBS, resume library at colleges and universities in your area if they're local college or university close to you and they'll have a job search resource set up put your resume into there and then industry specific searches there's a list that they've got there where you can look for industry specific job boards and that's a pretty extensive list I went and had a look at that earlier and it's quite good and so at the start of the week remember if it's a new Monday that means the new week and then make some new goals or maybe revisit goals you've got perhaps your goal is to get your resume into more places this might be a good tool to add to that quiver of arrows on getting your job resume posted more I hope you have a great week. I'll talk to you tomorrow, it's a wrap.